

La Providence

The Common Wealth Resolution

A proposition for a canadian constitutional reform
into the province of Quebec, trough a common right act harmonization.

By: Maxim St-Jacques, Certificate of Advanced Studies
University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology
From the 18th september 2000 to the 8th june 2001

University of Quebec At Montreal
BaA 1999-2003

La Providence

Abstract

As the mondialisation of the économie presents new challenges, a growing concern about social welfare as to be taken into account.

As a world of freedom and liberty relies on cultural diversity and acquaintance, the global community has to lay on natural propensity of resources and people flow to conform to and adapt within forecoming issues. So there could be a common right reform that could be aimed to.

According to myself, social welfare globally presents the resource distribution processes as the right way to resolve imparts trough the balance of goods that foresees economic managing; a social justice based on right could be that process to guide toward education. And as solving equilibrium progress, productivity growth thus depicts equality systems.

Social reality perspective

As former democratic systems of labour distribution led to centralized reforms of policies that statute and protect rights for labour to anyone, who's able to work either in partnership, community or employment is akin to exchange its labour force, skills and knowledge with the conveyance that rule exchanges as the second nature of money.

So with the ability to produce goods in a society, which is now based within former production means and capital investments, the decision choices and resources that confer the capacity to rely on a long term prosperity now represents to me the narrowing ability to convey those facilities over the account of time and space borders. Hence, as the present conflital socio-economical context do not convey the possibilities that was first purposed within resources disponibility, the choice that better represents upcoming social outcomes for global economic challenges should be settled as forth to be conducting mainly toward self security.

Therefore, as the new resource complexity states the current ecosystemic changes, the global and cultural diversity states imparting acquaintance. And according to myself, as the climatic cycles has always present social welfare, so further global exchanges, resources equilibrium prospects is now offering the better ways to prevent future complexity as so to comply with timeless values in a more certain global welfare perspective. So there is simply a human right concern, as I suggest, in the present social and economic controversy that should be conclusive consistently.